PREFACE.

THE Proprietors trust that the present—the seventh—Edition of KELLY'S DIRECTORY OF ESSEX may be found at least equal in accuracy to the previous ones.

Every parish in the county will again be found to be included in the book, which, though necessarily above all things a Directory, still continues in some measure to be a gazetteer, giving as it does a topographical account of every Town, Parish, Village and Township (with its distance from London and other chief Towns), and descriptions of the principal buildings and objects of interest.

Full information as to the County Council; the Hundreds, Unions and County Court Districts; the Churches, with the value of the Livings and the names of the Patrons and Incumbents; the chief Landowners, with details as to the Principal Seats; the Hospitals and Charities, whether general or local; the Acreage, Soils and Crops; the Markets and Fairs; the means of Conveyance by Railway, etc., will be found in its pages.

The Map of the County has been specially prepared for this Edition.

The Proprietors have again to return their thanks to those Clergymen, Magistrates' Clerks, Registrars and other Gentlemen who have assisted their Agents while collecting the information for the present Edition.

 The Letters S.O. at the end of addresses in various parts of the book are abbreviations adopted by the Post Office to indicate a Sub-Office, and these initials should be used in addressing letters to assist the sorters and thus avoid possible delay in correspondence. The letters R.S.O. have been abolished.

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the Postal Information to be found in the book:— M.O. & T.O. for Money Order and Telegraph Office; T.M.O. for Telegraph Money Order Office; P.P. for Parcel s Post; S.B. for Savings Bank; and A. & I. for Annuity and Insurance Office.

ESSEX.

ESSEX.

ESSEX is one of the metropolitan shires and takes its name from the commonwealth of the East Saxons (one of the English hordes which settled in South Britain), and of which Middlesex, London and Hertfordshire afterwards formed part. After the Euskardians and Celts had been driven out, Essex was held by the Belgic tribe of the Trinobantes until the Roman inroad. Of the Romans it was a great seat and here was their city of Camulodunum. The Welch, again becoming masters, were driven out by the East Saxons. The chief clans concerned in the settlement were the Tilling, Halling, Denning, Thurring, Benning, Billing, Horning, Manning, Totting, Bucking and Dunning, being the same as those engaged in the settlement of East Anglia. In 823 it came under the sway of the West Saxons under Egbert, though more than once given up to the Danes.

The county is of an irregular shape, being in its greatest length, from north-east to south-west, 63 miles, and from north to south 48 miles. By the "Confirmation" (No. 14), 1895, the parishes of Heydon, Great and Little Chishall and parts of those of Haverhill and Kedington were transferred, the first three to Cambridgeshire and the two last to Suffolk. The area of the ancient or geographical county is 986,975 acres, and of the administrative county, 979,532, being the 15th English shire for size. In 1881 its population was 576,434; and in 1891 was 784,258; males, 389,949; females, 394,309. In 1901 the population was 1,085,771 in the ancient county and 1,083,998 in the administrative county. The number of houses was: in the ancient county, 201,510 inhabited, 13,942 uninhabited and 3,681 building; in the administrative county, 201,028 inhabited, 13,894 uninhabited and 3,681 building. On the east and south-east the county is bounded by the North Sea; on the south by the Thames, which flows between it and Kent; on the west by the Lee against Middlesex and by the Stort against Hertfordshire; on the north by Cambridge and on the north-east by the Stour, separating it from Suffolk. On the east the shore is broken by the deep friths and creeks of the Stour, Colne, Blackwater, Crouch and Thames and by the inlets round Horsey, Mersea and Havengore islands.

*By the rise of the tide is meant its vertical rise above the mean low water level of spring tides.

The Thames flows through London to the North Sea, having several quays, but no great haven on the Essex shore, and the limits of the port of London extend to Havengore creek in this county. The Lee, and its head, the Stort, are navigable, passing through Bishop Stortford, Harlow and Waltham Abbey; the Roding rises in Easton Park, near Dunmow, and flows south for about 36 miles past Ongar to Ilford, where it becomes navigable, and, passing Barking, joins the Thames: the Bourne brook, 12 miles long, falls into the Thames at Dagenham: the Ingerbourne rises in South Weald and falls into the Thames near Rainham: the Marditch, 12 miles long, forms a creek at Purfleet: the Crouch, 25 miles long, waters south-east Essex and is navigable from Hull Bridge to the North Sea; Burnham is its port: the Bromhill is a creek, 10 miles long, and navigable for 7 miles to near Rochford: the river Chelmer, 46 miles long, rising in the north-west near Debden, and flowing south, passes Dunmow and Chelmsford, where it is made navigable, thence east to Maldon (its port), receiving the Ter, 13 miles long, the Wid and Cann, 14 miles long, and the Sandon Brook, 10 miles long; near Maldon it joins the Blackwater, which has for its feeder the Podsbrook: the Colne, 35 miles long, rises on the northern border near Birdbrook, becomes navigable at Colchester, and receiving the Roman river, flows into the North Sea: the Holland creek falls into the North Sea at Little Holland: the Stour is about 50 miles long, becomes navigable at Sudbury and passes the ports of Manningtree and Harwich to the North Sea: in the north-west the Cam and Slade brooks pass into Cambridgeshire.

The railways in this county are controlled by the Great Eastern railway, and consist of two main lines and numerous branches. The principal line from London to Cambridge runs along the western side of this county and the eastern of Hertfordshire, from Tottenham to Bishop Stortford, and then cuts across the north-west angle of Essex to Chesterford and thence to Cambridge: the branches from this line are one from Broxbourne to Ware and Hertford, from which again a branch leaving St. Margarets goes to Buntingford, these two branches being actually in Hertfordshire; one from Bishop Stortford going due east through Dunmow to Braintree, and then south-east until it joins the Ipswich line at Witham, and a third branch leaves Audley End and runs through Saffron Walden to the Haverhill and Sudbury line. The other main line, that to Ipswich, Norwich &c. enters the county at Stratford, where two short branch lines go north to Chingford and Chipping Ongar, through Woodford (with a loop line to Ilford), and one south to North Woolwich; from thence is a ferry to Woolwich in Kent. The main line passes through Romford, Ingatestone, Chelmsford, Witham and a little north of Colchester, and leaves the county at Manningtree; the branches from it are one from Shenfield to Billericay, Wickford (where a branch runs off to Maldon, with another leaving it at Woodham Ferris for Burnham and Southminster), Rayleigh, Rochford and Southend; another branch leaves Witham for Maldon, where it joins the branch from Wickford. The next branch is from Marks Tey northward to Sudbury, where it turns westward and runs along the northern border of the county as far as Linton, having a short branch from Bartlow to Saffron Walden and Audley End; from St. Botolph on the Ipswich main line a branch runs to Walton-on-the-Naze, having branches from Wivenhoe to Brightlingsea and from Thorpe to Clacton-on-Sea, and from Manningtree a branch runs to Parkstone Quay and Harwich.

The London, Tilbury and Southend railway, which starts from Fenchurch street, passes through the southern part of the county from Plaistow via Barking, Hornon, Pitsea, North Benfleet, Southend to Shoeburyness, the old loop line of the same railway leaving the line at Barking, running alongside the river by Tilbury and rejoining the new line via Stanford-le-Hope (with a branch to Thames Haven), while another branch runs from Romford to Grays and Tilbury by Chadwell Heath and Ockendon, and the Midland connects with these railways by a line from St. Pancras via Tottenham and Forest Gate to Barking, and runs trains in connection with the London, Tilbury and Southend line from St. Pancras to Southend.

The Colne Valley railway runs from Chappel, on the Great Eastern Sudbury branch, via Castle Hedingham and Yeldham to Haverhill.

The District railway opened a branch line in June, 1902, from Whitechapel to East Ham.

The county has much rich meadow ground on the shores of the brooks and marsh lands, on the friths and creeks: on the shore are many marsh islands, like those of Holland; of these Canvey, Foulness, Wallasea, Mersea, Horsea, Havengore and Potton are the greatest: much of the shore is sheltered against the tides and storms by dykes and sea walls. The inland parts are somewhat hilly and well timbered: the highest hills of the London clay, which do not exceed 300 feet, are High Beech, near Waltham Abbey, Danbury, Tiptree Heath, near Witham, and Laindon Hills, near Brentwood.

Essex, of which Chelmsford is the assize town, is included within the South-Eastern Circuit, and forms one court of Quarter Sessions and is divided into 18 petty sessional divisions. Part of Becontree hundred viz. Barking, East Ham, West Ham, Little Ilford, Low Leyton, Walthamstow, Wanstead, St. Mary Woodford and Chingford is within the bounds of the Central Criminal Court, and with Dagenham, Chadwell Heath, Waltham Abbey, Loughton and Chigwell, under the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan police. The County Courts (which are in Circuits 35 and 38) are held at Saffron Walden, Braintree, Brentwood, Chelmsford, Colchester, Dunmow, Grays Thurrock, Halstead, Harwich, Maldon, Romford, Southend and Waltham Abbey.

There are four coroner's districts:—Colchester, Maldon, Saffron Walden and West Ham.

The shire is ecclesiastically within the diocese of St. Albans and divided into two archdeaconries: Colchester, sub-divided into the rural deaneries of Ardleigh and Harwich, Braintree, Coggeshall, Colchester, Dedham, Halstead, Hatfield Peverel, Hedingham, Mersea, Newport, Saffron Walden, St. Osyth, Sampford, Witham and Yeldham; and Essex, sub-divided into the rural deaneries of Barking, North, South and West, Barstable, Canewdon, Chafford, Chelmsford, Chigwell, Danbury, Dengie, Dunmow, Harlow, Ingatestone, Lambourne, Maldon, Ongar, Orsett, Rochford and Roding: Ballingdon, a suburb of Sudbury in Suffolk, is in the diocese of Ely. There are no cathedrals or great endowments.

The county contains 399 civil parishes. The Municipal boroughs are:—Chelmsford, population in 1901, 12,580; Colchester, population, 38,373; Harwich, population, 10,070; Maldon, population, 5,564; Saffron Walden, population, 5,896; Southend-on-Sea, 28,857; West Ham (County Borough), 267,358.

Other towns are: East Ham, 96,018; Walthamstow, 95,131; Ilford, 41,234; Barking, 21,547; Woodford, 13,806; Romford, 13,656; Clacton, 7,456; Halstead, 6,072; Braintree, 5,330; Brentwood, 4,932; and Witham, 3,454.

The Essex men are mostly employed in husbandry and stock feeding, and only a few in manufactures of silk &c. at Braintree and Halstead; there is a silk mill at Chelmsford. The minerals worked are chalk for lime, 581,081 tons, value £21,937, having been raised in 1904; brick clay, 114,785 tons, value £6,094; the other minerals raised were gravel and sand, 36,151 tons, valued at £2,913; chert and flint, 7,308 tons; salt is made from the sea. Seeds are grown in various parts. The trade of the towns on the shore is in the oyster and other fisheries and in shipping corn, coals and timber. The Colne oyster fishery is of great value and importance; it furnishes the finest natives, and belongs to Colchester: in the rivers Crouch, Roach and Blackwater the native oyster is indigenous, and the spat or brood is successfully caught and preserved; these grounds seem to be the natural home of the native oyster owing to the peculiar character of the water, the geological nature of the river beds, which by their sheltered position maintain an equable temperature at the most critical time in the spawning or spatting season. The chief object of cultivators is to protect and preserve the spat from its numerous enemies throughout the infantine and delicately susceptible stages; millions of these little molluscs here produced are sold at the age of from one to two years, to be laid down and mature and fatten for market; by which time they are four to five years old: the far-famed Royal Whitstable Native is here bred, as also the famous Ostend oyster of the Continent, so that destruction here means ruin in these and other places: that the area of breeding grounds cannot be artificially extended has been proved by the futile effort of many companies formed for that purpose; and it is a well-known fact that sewage is both poisonous and destructive to oysters, especially in their early stages. The ports of the county are Manningtree, Harwich, Brightlingsea, Colchester, Salcott, Maldon, Bradwell, Burnham, Wakering, Southend, Leigh, Grays, Purfleet and Barking. The Royal Victoria and Albert Docks are in Plaistow Level; there are also very large docks at Tilbury, opened in 1886, all connected with London by rail. From Southend, boats also run to Boulogne, Ostend, Margate, Ramsgate and Yarmouth. Steamers go up the Orwell from Harwich to Ipswich. Harwich, Southend, Walton and Clacton are bathing places. It is a handsome white brick building, with a tower containing a clock, and has beds for 100 patients, and is supported by subscriptions, donations, collections and bequests: during the year 1905 there were 874 in-patients and 2,948 out-patients. PUBLICATIONS OF THE (GOVERNMENT) GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

Coloured Maps, on the scale of one inch to a mile.—Quarter-sheets, 1 N.E., Maldon, Chelmsford, Billericay, Latchingdon, Herongate: 1 S.E., Langdon Hill, Tilbury, Hadleigh, Southend: 1 N.W., Waltham Abbey, Epping, Brentwood, Woodford, Chipping Ongar: 1 S.W., Stratford, Barking, Purfleet, Grays Thurrock: Sheet 2, Mouths of the rivers Blackwater, Crouch, and Thames; with the towns of Bradwell, Burnham, Shoeburyness, &c.: Sheet 47, Great Yeldham, Thaxted, Great Chesterford, Saffron Walden, Newport, Dunmow, Braintree, Harlow, Roydon, &c.: Quarter-sheets, 48 N.E., Harwich to Wrabness, &c.: 48 S.E., Walton-on-the-Naze, &c.: 48 N.W., Manningtree to Langham and Horksley, &c.: 48 S.W., Colchester, Colne Estuary, Tendring, &c.

Index Map [scale, 4 miles to one inch]: Sheet 12 (price, 2s. 6d.) includes the whole of Essex, and is a most useful map. It does not, however, show the "Drift."

The above maps are further illustrated by the Horizontal Sections, Nos. 84, 120, 126: and they are described and explained in the "Memoirs" mentioned below.

"Solid" and "Drift" Maps.—It must be remembered that two editions are published of the maps of the Geological Survey. The first, original, or "Solid" edition, shows the truly stratified rocks as forming the surface of the ground; all the irregular layers of boulder-clay, sand, gravel, loam, &c., being supposed to be removed or swept away. The second, or "Drift" edition, only shows the strata referred to above where they do actually form the surface; the "drift" being shown in addition, and coloured so as to indicate where boulder-clay occurs; where the glacial loams lie; and also the pebble-gravels, &c. For most purposes the "Drift" edition is to be preferred. In both sets of maps the soil is ignored; or rather it is considered to be but an altered state of the beds which form the sub-soil and which lie immediately beneath the soil proper.

The agents for the sale of all the publications of the Geological Survey include J. P. Green, Chelmsford; and E. Stanford, 12 Long acre, London w c.

Introduction to Geology.—For students of Geology, and for general readers who may require explanations of the terms used in Geology, and some account of the relation borne by the strata of Essex to those of the other counties of England, we may mention Harrison's Text-Book of Geology, published by Blackie & Son, fifth edition, 1903, price 3s. 6d.

Identification of Fossils.—The Palæontographical Society was established in 1847. Its volumes (published annually) contain beautifully drawn illustrations and descriptions of many thousands of species of British fossils. Among those who have contributed accounts of Essex fossils we may name Professors Owen, Bell, Leith-Adams, &c.; and Messrs. F. E. Edwards, M. Edwards, J. Haime, S. V. Wood (father and son), Davidson, H. Woods, &c. Lists of the contents of the 59 volumes already issued may be obtained from Dulau & Co. 37 Soho square w.

THE rocks of Essex have attracted their full share of attention from geological observers. The Government Geological Survey has published coloured maps of the whole of the county, prepared by Messrs. Bristow, Whitaker, Boyd-Dawkins, Dalton, Penning, Bennett, and others: on these maps the various layers or strata of rock are laid down with the utmost accuracy, and indicated by means of various colours.

The geology of the southern portion bordering on the Thames and Lea has been described by Mr. W. Whitaker in his "Geology of the London Basin," and in a later work entitled "The Geology of London and of Part of the Thames Valley." The same author has also published a description of the strata in the "Eastern End" of the county, round Harwich and the Naze; and other "Memoirs," which are mentioned above. Numerous papers by Professor Owen, Messrs. Brown, Mitchell, Clarke, Charlesworth, Searles V. Wood, Harmer, Penning, Sir J. Prestwich, T. V. Holmes, A. S. Kennard, Rev. A. Irving, H. B. Woodward, M. A. C. Hinton, A. E. Salter, &c., have appeared in the Journal of the Geological Society, in the "Geological Magazine," and in the "Proceedings of the Geologists' Association." The surface deposits at Grays and Ilford are favourite hunting grounds of the members of the Geologists' Association, and have frequently been described in their Proceedings.

Geological Formations in Essex.—The county affords but a small diversity of the stratified rocks. The strata rest one upon the other with a general inclination or dip to the south-east: a consequence of this is that the lowest (and therefore oldest) beds crop up and occupy the surface in the north-west of the county, and here accordingly we find the white chalk or Upper Cretaceous strata. Resting upon the chalk, but formed at a much later period, are the lower Tertiary strata known as the Thanet Sands with the Woolwich and Reading beds; above which comes the London Clay; and lastly, a few outliers of the sandy Bagshot Beds. Subsequent comparatively recent deposits of boulder-clay, sand, brick-earth, gravel, &c., repose irregularly upon the eroded edges of the true rock-masses enumerated above.

The London Basin.—The key to the geological structure of Essex lies in the fact that it forms the eastern portion of the "London Basin" (See section across this Basin given in the article on the Geology of Middlesex). Perhaps "trough" would be a better name than "basin"; but the point to understand is, that after the formation of the Chalk, an immense earth-force (of whose exact origin and mode of action we are still more or less ignorant) began to act from the south, throwing the Chalk into low folds which ran from east to west. The Upper Chalk was then in part eroded, and in the slight hollow thus formed the Tertiary strata were laid down in an area extending at least 120 miles from Hungerford on the west to Reculvers on the east; and over 60 miles from Sudbury on the north to Canterbury on the south. To the east, this trough or basin is doubtless continued beneath the waters of the North Sea. The result is that while in the north of Essex—or from Sudbury to Thaxted, &c.—all the strata have a southerly dip, in the south of the county—as along the banks of the Thames—they dip to the north. The latter, or northern dip, is, however, rather steeper than the southern dip. Thus beneath the centre of Essex—as at Chelmsford, &c.—the strata must lie horizontally.

This pressure from the south has been called the "Armorican" movement, because its effects are very prominent in Brittany. After the deposition of the Eocene strata this pressure was renewed with greater intensity; and was continued during at least the early part of the Pliocene epoch. We see the final results of this great earth-movement all over the South of England and in South Wales. All this area was thrown into great synclines and anticlines, which ran east and west. In the synclines, the result has been to preserve the strata—as we see in the London Basin, the Hampshire Basin, and the South Wales Coal-field: while in the anticlines—the best example of which is the Weald of Kent and Sussex—the upper strata have been denuded, exposing the older rocks beneath.

But proceeding from some area far to the north and west of the London Basin, a second great earth-movement took place, and we see its results in the line taken by the Chalk from north-east to south-west, forming the escarpment of the Chiltern Hills, the Downs of Royston, &c. This second earth-pressure came from the north-west, and its effects are specially marked in the Scottish Highlands, so that it is known as the "Caledonian" movement. To the joint action of these two great earth-crust forces (though principally to the Armorican) the London Basin owes its present form, extent and position.

OLD ROCKS BENEATH ESSEX.—Lying far below the surface of Essex—at a depth of about one thousand feet—stratified rocks of great geological age occur which have been reached by means of deep borings, but which only rise to the surface in other districts far to the west of Essex. In 1858 a deep boring at Harwich passed through—Drift, &c., 25 feet: London Clay, 23 feet: Reading, &c., Beds, 30 feet: Chalk, 890 feet: Gault, 61 feet: the bore-hole then entered "dark slaty rock," which was bored into for 69 feet: making the total depth 1,098 feet. In the slaty rock at the bottom some markings were observed which were believed to indicate the presence of the fossil shell Posidonomya, and these bottom beds were therefore thought to be of Lower Carboniferous age. But in 1896, Professor W. W. Watts showed [see Report Geological Survey, p. 5] that the supposed "shell" was but an accidental wavy mark or wrinkle in the slaty rock. In later years (1894, &c.) other deep borings have proved the occurrence of a similar slaty rock at Stutton (on the north side of the Stour estuary) at a depth of 994 feet. A third boring at Weeley (between Colchester and Walton-on-the-Naze) reached old rocks at 1,094 feet: specimens which were sent to us strongly resembled a sandstone of Cambrian age.

DOES COAL UNDERLIE ESSEX?—From the supposed occurrence of Lower Carboniferous rocks beneath Harwich, we were led in 1895 to give a somewhat favourable opinion as to the possibility of the occurrence of a coal-field beneath some part or other of Essex, recommending a point south-west of Newport for a preliminary trial by boring. But the discovery by Professor Watts removes the chief reason for such a supposition. That a plain of old rocks underlies Essex at a depth of about 1,000 feet is unquestionable, but that plain would seem to consist on the whole of strata which are older than those (the Upper Carboniferous beds) which contain seams of coal. Still, these older rocks are probably much folded, and they may include in their folds portions of the Carboniferous strata.

We may mention here other local deep borings (mostly made in search of water), which have not, however, reached the old rocks:—Saffron Walden, "over 1,000 feet"; this boring was made in 1836, and is said to have reached a depth of 1,004 feet, ending in "blue clay" (? the Gault); the depth would seem to be exaggerated: Loughton, 1,100 feet, ending in the Gault: South Shoebury, 1,048 feet, ending in Lower Chalk: Wickham Bishop, 1,180 feet, of which the lower 703 feet was chalk (not bottomed).

THE UPPER CRETACEOUS FORMATION.—Commencing, then, with the beds of chalk which we have already stated to be the lowest and oldest of the strata which form the surface of the county of Essex, we find in the north-west of the county hilly and undulating ground, which presents, though in a less marked manner, the characteristic features of the downs of the south of England. This chalk district extends from the north and west boundaries of the county as far south as a line drawn through or a little north of Bishop's Stortford, Castle Hedingham, and Sudbury. It is only along the boundary line with Cambridgeshire, however, that the chalk hills make any feature in the Essex landscape, or that we find the white earthy limestone known as chalk actually forming the surface. The Royston downs rise to a height of 400 feet, and from this point to Linton and Haverhill the average height is between 300 and 400 feet. The top of the Rivey, a hill just outside the county near Linton, is 325 feet above the river Cam and 365 above the sea-level. The Middle Chalk is exposed along the north-western slope of this low escarpment and also along the valleys of the little streams that run northwards into the Cam.

The Lower Chalk forms the western base of the line of chalk hills, and does not extend—at the surface—into Essex.

The Upper Chalk is distinguished by the presence of numerous layers of flints, which are absent, or at all events not so common, in the beds below. A microscopical examination of chalk reveals the fact that it is almost entirely composed of minute shells of the foraminifera, a class of lowly animals which are, even now, forming a deposit very similar to chalk on the bed of the North Atlantic Ocean. The Chalk dips gently to the south-east and undoubtedly underlies the whole of Essex, rising again to the surface on the south of the Thames to form the Kentish hills known as the North Downs. Owing to a minor undulation, one little patch of Chalk, however, crops out in the south of the county between Purfleet and Grays Thurrock; here it is largely worked for the manufacture of "whiting" and Roman cement, and the flint nodules have been employed in making porcelain. Numerous fossils, as sea-urchins of the genera Holaster, Ananchytes, Micraster, and Echinoconus, shells, as Terebratulina carnea, Inoceramus mytiloides, &c., and in fact all the ordinary fossils of the Middle and Upper Chalk, are fairly plentiful. At Grays the Chalk has been proved by boring to be about 660 feet thick, and at Harwich 890 feet. Being a porous rock, the Chalk is very important as a source of water-supply: it has also been much used in times past for marling the land: while the flints make good road-metal.

THE TERTIARY PERIOD.—The Chalk was probably deposited at the bottom of a moderately deep and clear sea, and was hardened, elevated to form dry land, its surface in part eroded, and again depressed, before the next bed of rock (the Thanet Sands) was deposited upon its surface. Evidently, then, there must have been a great interval of time between the formation of these two beds of rock, and proofs of this interval are further furnished by the fact that the fossils found in the beds we are now going to describe are of an entirely different nature to those which occur in the Chalk, showing that a complete change in the life existing in this region of the earth had taken place. Here then geologists draw one of their great boundary lines, placing the Chalk, with certain beds beneath it, in a group denominated the Secondary; beds lower still (coal, slate, &c.) are known as Primary; but the newer, higher strata which lie upon the Chalk are denominated Tertiary, or third in order of the great groups of stratified rocks.

The lowest Tertiary strata are collectively known as the Eocene Formation, and are subdivided into—

(1.) The Thanet Sands.—Resting on the beds of Chalk in South Essex near Grays we find 20 or 30 feet of fine light-coloured sands, in which few or no fossils occur; these are known as the “Thanet Sands,” because they are well exposed in the Isle of Thanet: they have at their base a layer of unworn green-coated flints known to the workmen as the “Bull-head Bed.” Mr. W. Whitaker has shown that the Thanet Sands also occur at Ballingdon, a suburb of Sudbury, where they are 15 feet thick, and from this point they may extend along the edge of the Chalk to Thaxted. Beyond this place, westwards, the Thanet Sands are overlapped by newer strata, and are not seen at the surface: they are of marine origin, and are practically unfossiliferous.

(2.) The Woolwich and Reading Beds.—These are mottled clays and sands, also seen at Sudbury, above the Thanet Sands; thence they run by Shalford and Easton Park to Bishop's Stortford, where they are well exposed in several brickyards. In South Essex they extend from Wennington by Orsett to Stanford. Their thickness is about 40 feet; they are here of estuarine origin, and contain such shells as Cyrena cuneiformis and Ostrea bellovacina, with plant-remains.

(3.) The Blackheath (or Oldhaven) beds also occur near Orsett; they are composed of well-rolled flint pebbles embedded in grey sand, and are only a few feet thick. Mr. Bristow remarks: “At Hassenbrooke, east of Orsett, the farmer has some very productive strawberry beds, and the fruit, well known for its good quality, fetches a high price. I was told that the produce of 12 acres fetches £100 a week in Covent Garden Market, a price much above what the neighbouring growers can get. The explanation of this difference in quality is, I believe, that the sandy pebble-bed upon which these strawberries are grown makes a soil especially favourable for their cultivation, and that good gardening has little to do with the matter.”

(4.) The London Clay.—This is the chief Essex formation. When we descend the gentle eastern slope of the chalk-hills, we see before us to the south-east a second escarpment, rising in low hills to heights of between 200 and 300 feet above the sea. The lowest portion of the northern or north-western slope of this second line of hills is composed of the Reading beds, but on the top and stretching thence south-east right away to the mouth of the Thames and to the North Sea, we find beds of stiff brownish and bluish clays in which layers of septaria occur: the latter are rounded masses of impure carbonate of lime, usually traversed by cracks, which are filled up with crystals of the same material. In the south-east of Essex the London Clay is 480 feet thick, but it thins out considerably as we follow it westwards. It forms the low cliffs at Harwich, Walton-on-the-Naze, Frinton, Southend, Shoeburyness, and Clacton; and is also well exposed round Langdon Hill, in Hainault and Epping Forests, near Waltham Abbey, and in the valleys of the Crouch, Stour, Colne, Blackwater, and Chelmer. Over most of its area, however, as between Colchester, Dunmow, and Chelmsford, the London Clay is covered over and concealed by Glacial Drift. Where it does crop out it forms a dark unfertile soil. Near Harwich the London Clay was formerly worked for the septaria, which were used for the manufacture of cement. Here, too, it contains numerous small nodules of iron pyrites, which were formerly collected on the beach near Walton, for the manufacture of copperas, to the amount of about 150 tons yearly. At many places in Essex the London Clay is worked for the manufacture of bricks and tiles, and sections may be seen near Brentwood Railway Station, Galleywood, Ingatestone, Maldon, &c.

There is a mineral spring at Hockley, the water of which, like much of that from the London Clay, contains sulphate of magnesia (Epsom salts). An endeavour was made many years ago to construct here a “spa” with “pump rooms,” and to dispense the waters; a woman was employed whose strong healthy appearance visitors were led to believe was the result of their medicinal effects. In spite, however, of such a strong corroboration of the efficacy of the Hockley waters, the public refused to be cured, and the speculation proved a failure; all that now remains of the spa being the buildings which are still known as “Hockley Spa.” Teazles grow well on the London Clay, and also the elm, oak, and ash.

(5.) The Bagshot Beds.—These sandy, almost unfossiliferous, strata occur only as outlying patches in the southern half of the county: they contain pebble-beds, formed of well-rolled flints only, and are about 25 feet thick: their position is invariably on the high ground and hill-tops, and springs issue from their junction with the London Clay below. They occur at High Beech; on the hill at Havering-atte-Bower; and there is a rather large mass which stretches southwards from Shenfield by Brentwood to Warley Common; they form the upper layers of the Brentwood brickfields; are also exposed in the railway cutting there; and constitute the pebble-beds which have been extensively dug on Warley Common: other patches occur near Frierning, Stock, Galleywood Common and Rayleigh: They also form the upper part of Langdon Hill, which rises to a height of 388 feet, and can be seen from long distances. These Bagshot Beds were deposited in a shallow sea traversed by shifting currents, and close to the land. The only fossils found in the Essex Bagshots consist of a few casts of such shells as Voluta and Natica, which were found at Mill Green, north of Frierning, by Messrs. Monckton and Herries.

Now the five divisions of the Tertiary Epoch which we have described, viz., the (1) Thanet, (2) Reading, (3) Blackheath, (4) London Clay, and (5) Bagshot Beds, are considered by geologists to form as a whole the lower division of the Eocene formation. After the deposition of the Bagshot Beds, the area we are describing seems to have been elevated so as to become dry land; at all events, there are no traces in Essex of strata of Upper Eocene age, nor of the succeeding Oligocene period, which we find well represented in the Isle of Wight and on the Continent. Neither is there present in Essex any representative of the next period in upward succession—the Miocene. Indeed, after the deposition of the Bagshot Beds the greater part of Britain seems to have been elevated, and to have formed part of a great continental area.

PLIOCENE FORMATION.—In the Eocene beds only a very few of the fossil shells (about 3½ per cent.) are identical with species now living: in the Pliocene strata, on the contrary, we find even in the lowest beds that one-half of the fossil shells belong to living species, while in the upper portion nine-tenths are precisely similar to existing forms. These Pliocene beds only occur in the eastern counties, where they have received the name of “crag,” from the Celtic word creggan, a shell, in allusion to the fact that the beds are almost made up of a mass of comminuted shells.

The Red Crag.—The Lower, White, or Coralline Crag does not occur in Essex, so that the Red Crag rests directly upon the London Clay; it only occurs in the north-east corner of the county, where it is well exposed in the fine cliff sections at Walton Naze. Here we see the Red Crag to be a coarse, reddish brown and grey sand, about 20 feet in thickness, full of shells, and showing much false bedding. Harwich cliff had also once a capping of Red Crag, but this has been removed by the encroachment of the sea. Other outlying patches of Red Crag occur at Beaumont, Little Oakley, Ramsey, Manningtree, Langham, and south of Boxted, &c. Of shell-fish, 148 species have been obtained from Walton, of which 75 are Mediterranean species, showing a rather warmer climate than at present: the most characteristic species are Neptunea contraria, Columbella sulcata, Nassa elegans, &c.

Coprolite Bed.—At the base of the Red Crag we find a layer of phosphatic nodules, whose valuable fertilising properties were first pointed out by the late Professor Henslow: this bed has been worked at Wrabness, Little Oakley, &c., and many thousands of tons altogether of these coprolites have been raised in Essex, but the workings have now ceased.

Chillesford Beds.—At Walton-on-the-Naze we see 6 or 7 feet of sandy clay resting on the Red Crag, which may possibly belong to these beds.

DEPOSITS OF DOUBTFUL AGE.—At certain points in Essex, gravel-beds exist whose geological age is doubtful: they can be seen in places to rest upon the Bagshot Beds; and elsewhere they can be seen to pass underneath the Glacial Drift. They consist mainly of well-rounded flint-pebbles, with small pebbles of white quartz. Such gravels cap the hills at High Beech; near Brentwood; Langdon Hill, &c. They have been named “Westleton Beds” by Sir J. Prestwich from their supposed identity with the gravel beds at a village in Suffolk bearing that name. Other high-level gravels are very similar in composition to the Westleton Beds, but in addition contain fragments of chert and rag-stone which appear to have come from the hills of Kent: these are known as "Southern Drift." To most of these beds the name of "Pebbly Gravel" has been given by Mr. W. Whitaker, and it is a useful term, for it states a fact without expressing an opinion; and much more research is needed into the subject before any definite statements as to the exact age and geological position of these deposits of "doubtful age" can be made. On the whole these pebble-gravels seem to be of fluvial origin; and to belong to the early part of the Pleistocene formation.

PLEISTOCENE FORMATION.—The Drift or Glacial Beds.—Beds of Upper Pliocene age found in Norfolk and Suffolk give plain indications that a colder climate was then beginning to prevail. The warm-water or Mediterranean shells of the Red Crag disappear and are replaced by Arctic forms: still later we enter on a period of severe cold, when icebergs detached from glaciers, which then covered all the north of Great Britain and the whole of Scandinavia, came sailing southwards down the North Sea laden with rocks detached from the land over which they rubbed; and later still the glaciers themselves pushed southwards as far as Essex and Middlesex. The first or lowest glacial deposits found in Essex are loams, gravels and sands: they are overlaid and in places overlapped by the Chalky Boulder-Clay, which reaches southwards to the northern edge of the Thames Valley; its southernmost point (as shown by existing boulder-clay) reaching to Hornchurch, between Romford and Upminster. Thus this great Chalky Boulder-Clay is spread as a surface covering over all the stratified rocks of central and northern Essex, except along the bottoms of the river valleys, where it has been washed away, exposing the glacial gravels beneath. It is a stiff, clayey mass of a brownish hue, full of chalk-pebbles, flints and pieces of rock brought from the north and north-west, containing, too, numerous fossils knocked out of older rocks and brought from afar; it often forms a stumbling block to the young geologist, who fails to distinguish it from the truly-stratified rocks which it overlies and conceals.

Glacial Action in North Essex.—In the north of Essex the glacial ice pressing southwards produced some remarkable local results. Mr. W. Whitaker has described [Q. Journ. Geol. Soc., vol. xlv., p. 333] a deep channel either ploughed-out by a glacier or eroded by torrents proceeding from melting ice, which is found in the valley of the Cam, and can be traced for 11 miles near Wenden, Quendon, Newport and Littlebury. This valley or gorge has been bored into in one place to as great a depth as 340 feet without reaching the Chalk, although the latter rock comes to the surface at no great distance. The glacial deposits by which the old gorge is filled up are chiefly loams, sands and gravels, with some boulder-clay.

And in the same Journal Mr. H. B. Woodward gives an account [vol. lix., p. 362] of the way in which the Upper Chalk near Great Chishall, Heydon, &c., has been bent over and the strata arched so as to dip northward near the top of the chalk-escarpment, instead of maintaining their normal south-easterly dip. The layers of flint also are broken; while it can be seen that boulder-clay has been forced right into and underneath the disturbed Chalk. In the article upon the Geology of Hertfordshire an illustration is given of this remarkable disturbance of the Chalk at a place (Barkway) which is only just outside the county boundary-line of Essex. All these abnormal appearances can be explained by the impact of an enormous mass of land-ice pressing southwards.

Glacial Lakes in South Essex.—The great sheet of ice from Scandinavia, &c., which gradually crept down and occupied the greater part of the area of the North Sea in Pleistocene times, made its appearance while the south-east of England was still a part of the Continent of Europe. But the wall of ice extending east and west across the North Sea dammed-up the water and so produced a great fresh-water lake to the south of it, into which the Rhine, Thames, &c., poured their waters. This glacial lake found an outlet to the south, and so the Straits of Dover were originated as—in the first place—a river-gorge. How far south exactly the ice extended we do not know; but a boss of drift still existing at Sheppey is probably near its southern limit. As the level of the water rose in this ice-dammed lake, so it extended westwards up the Thames Valley; and the extensive sheets of loam, brick-earth, &c., which occur at heights of from 50 to 100 feet above sea-level in south and south-east Essex, and which bear every sign of having accumulated in still, tranquil waters, may represent the principal deposits formed in this old lake, although sands and gravels also occur and indicate its margins. The idea of such a glacial lake was ably urged as long ago as 1874 by the late Mr. T. Belt [see Nature, vol. x., p. 35].

Recent or Post-Glacial Beds.—The original river-valleys of the Eastern Counties—dating back it may be to Pliocene or even in some cases to Miocene times—were probably filled up with drift during the Glacial period, and have since been more or less re-excavated by the rivers which now occupy them. Most of the material so removed has been swept out to the sea; but here and there along each river's course we find beds of fine loam or brick-earth, and again beds of gravel or sand, at varying heights, which have been deposited by the streams at different periods as they wore their way downwards. The brick-earths at Stratford, Ilford, Grays, Copford, &c. (which are about 30 feet in thickness), have yielded numerous remains of fresh-water mollusca, mainly such as still inhabit the adjoining district. At Grays, however, a shell known as Corbicula (or Cyrena) fluminalis occurs, which is now only found in the Nile; at Copford sixty-nine species of shells have been found, three of which (of the genus Helix) no longer inhabit England; from peat-beds exposed in the old brick-yard at Lexden, remains of beetles, mostly of non-British genera, have been obtained. Bones and teeth of the mammoth, of a rhinoceros, hippopotamus, and other extinct species also occur in these brick-earths. A very fine collection of the teeth, bones, &c., of these extinct mammals, made at Ilford by Sir Antonio Brady, was presented by him to the British Museum, and may now be seen in the Natural History Galleries, South Kensington.

Extensive deposits of sand and mud occur all along the Essex coast, from Shoeburyness to Harwich. At Clacton stumps of trees forming a submerged forest are to be seen at low water, which indicates a slight subsidence of the coastline. The slope of the land as it passes under the sea is a very gentle one, and indeed the deepest part of the North Sea between Essex and Holland is only 180 feet, so that a very slight elevation would suffice to render England again, as it was during Miocene, Pliocene, and Early Pleistocene times, a part of the continent of Europe. A well-sinking for water at Clacton-on-Sea in 1878 passed through Post-Glacial Sands, 18 feet; London Clay, 194 feet; Reading Beds, 56 feet; entering the Chalk at a depth of 270 feet; the same rock was found to lie 210 feet below the Castle Brewery, Colchester, but only 43 feet beneath Beckton.

Economic Geology of Essex.—Like the other counties of the east of England, Essex is not rich in minerals. The following figures for the year 1904 are extracted from the Government official publication—Mines and Quarries. These figures refer, however, only to excavations which are more than 20 feet in depth, so that the amounts stated—more especially of clay and of gravel and sand—are less than the quantities actually raised. Chalk, 581,081 tons, value £21,937: obtained chiefly from the pits along the north bank of the Thames at Grays, Thurrock, &c., and much used in the manufacture of whitening and Roman cement: Flint, 7,308 tons, value £865: Clay, 114,787 tons, value £6,094: Gravel and Sand, 36,151 tons, value £2,913. Total number of persons employed, 446.

PREHISTORIC MAN.—Many examples have been found in Essex of the flint and stone implements used by the early inhabitants of this country, when as yet metals were unknown. These may be divided into (a) Implements belonging to the older or Palaeolithic Stone Age, for the most part roughly chipped flints, which are found in sands or gravels (river-drift) often at considerable depths; and (b) the more dexterouslyfashioned and often rubbed or polished implements of the newer or Neolithic Stone Age, which occur on the surface or in the soil just beneath.

To the Palæolithic Stone Age we may assign a much-battered flint nodule found at Little Thurrock; it was probably used as a kind of hammer for the manufacture of other flint implements. At Quendon, near Saffron Walden, a pit 12 feet deep dug in sandy "drift" yielded a pointed flint tool, 8 inches in length; a small ovate tool occurred at Lexden Park, near Colchester; others were found north of the same town: the banks of the river Ter, near Felstead, yielded two more examples; and one tool found at North End Place, south of Felstead, was exceptional in being roughly chipped out of quartzite. Numerous examples of palæolithic flint implements have been found by that indefatigable investigator, Mr. Worthington G. Smith, in the old river-gravels on the eastern side of the river Lea, at Leyton, Plaistow, Forest-Gate, &c., in the valley of the Roding at Ilford, Barking, &c.; and eastwards along the northern margin of the Thames at Grays Thurrock, Tilbury, Southend, &c. The river-gravels containing these palæolithic implements were formed for the most part by the river Thames when it flowed at from 50 feet to 100 feet above the present level of its bed, and their age must therefore be great, certainly not less than 10,000 years, and probably much more.

The great question as to the existence of man in Britain before or during the Glacial Epoch is a point which may, perhaps, some day be settled in Essex by the discovery of an "implement" beneath undoubted boulder-clay. Mr. J. E. Greenhill records [Essex Field Club Journal, vol. iv., p. 95] the discovery of a stone tool, the work of human hands, beneath Chalky Boulder-Clay at Newport, and Mr. M. A. C. Hinton states (Proc. Geol. Assoc., vol. xvi., p. 272) that a fractured flint implement found in the Roding Valley shows distinct striæ upon its fractured surfaces. But the difficulties in the way of absolutely proving such occurrences are great; for example, the clay may have slipped over the beds containing the tools, or may have been disturbed in some other way. Still the evidence seems to be accumulating to prove that Man may have been coeval with Glacier-ice in the Thames Basin, probably living along the margin of the ice-sheet just as the Eskimo of Greenland do at the present day.

Of Neolithic implements a chipped flint celt or axe, 9 inches long and $3\frac{1}{4}$ broad, was found at Blunt's Hill, near Witham; another specimen, ground at the edge and $6\frac{1}{2}$ inches long, occurred at Stifford, near Grays Thurrock: the same spot also yielded a perforated stone hammer, circular in outline and 3 inches in diameter. At Audley End, a stone pestle, like a small club, $9\frac{1}{4}$ inches long, was found in a gravel pit, with a Roman cinerary urn. A remarkably large flint chip or flake was met with in digging the foundations of a house on Windmill Hill, Saffron Walden. Sir John Evans remarks (in his admirable book, "The Ancient Stone Implements of Great Britain") concerning this specimen: "One face is somewhat flatter than the other, but both faces are dexterously and symmetrically chipped over their whole surface. The small flakes have been taken off so skilfully and at such regular intervals that, so far as workmanship is concerned, this instrument approaches in character the elegant Danish blades. The form seems well adapted for a lance head, but on examination the edges appear to be slightly chipped and worn away, as if by scraping some hard material. It would appear then more probably to have been used in the hand." At Great Easton, near Dunmow, a flint pick or chisel has been found; and a perforated axe-head, made of greenstone, and $6\frac{1}{2}$ inches long, near Colchester. Lea Marshes yielded a polished celt, $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches in length; a stone pestle made of granite is recorded from Epping Forest; and a flint scraper from Walton-on-the-Naze, at which last-named spot there seems, indeed, to have been quite a flint "factory." Such were the tools and weapons used by our predecessors in this country up to perhaps 3,500 years ago, when metals (first bronze, and then iron) began to be used by the early inhabitants of this country. Doubtless many more specimens of these most interesting stone implements would be found if gravel-pits and other excavations were watched by intelligent observers. Of the bones of the men who made and used the flint implements hardly any discoveries have been made; but it is possible that a skeleton found in the gravel at Tilbury Docks at a depth of 34 feet may be that of a Neolithic man (see T. V. Holmes, Proc. Geol. Assoc., vol. viii., p. 392).

KELLY'S
ESSEX TRADES AND PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY.

DEDHAM, mentioned in the Domesday Survey, is a town and parish, consisting of one main street with three smaller ones branching from it and is in a picturesque valley, on the navigable river Stour, which separates it from Suffolk, 3 miles north from Ardleigh station on the Great Eastern railway, 7 north-north-east from Colchester, 4 west from Manningtree, 11 south-west from Ipswich and 59 from London, in the North Eastern division of the county, Lexden and Winstree petty sessional division and union, Lexden hundred, Colchester county court district, rural deanery of Dedham, archdeaconry of Colchester and diocese of St. Albans. The town is lighted with gas. The church of the Virgin Mary is a large building chiefly of brick and rubble in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave of six bays, aisles, north and south porches and a fine battlemented western tower of flint, 131 feet in height with 4 pinnacles and containing a clock and 8 bells rehung in 1881: this church was founded at the beginning of the 16th century by Thomas and John Webbe, father and son, both woollen manufacturers, whose merchants' mark, with the badges of York and Lancaster, appears on the tower; in the north aisle is the founders' tomb, a canopied monument of stone in a good state of preservation; the brass which bore the inscription is lost, but the date is supposed to be 1523: on the south side of the chancel there is a recess, now used as a credence table, and traditionally said to have been an oven used for baking the sacramental bread, there being a chimney leading from it: in the wall of the south aisle is the staircase which formerly led to the rood loft: the font, stated to have been found under the flooring at the west end of the church, bears traces of carving, though much mutilated; it bears the inscription following, which is also found on other fonts:—"NIΨON . ONOMHMA . MH . MONON . OΨIN:" the north door is of carved oak, but imperfect, some figures of saints in canopied recesses having been removed: the chancel was restored in 1880, when a carved stone reredos and sedilia were introduced: the piscina is ancient: in 1887 the organ was removed from the west to the east end of the south aisle and the exterior walls of the chancel and the north wall of the church were renovated: there are seven stained windows: the church was reseated in 1861 and has 610 sittings. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £170, with 1½ acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of the Duchy of Lancaster, and held since 1906 by the Rev. Frederick George Given-Wilson M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Attached to the church is a lectureship founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth and subsequently endowed by the Rev. William Burkitt and others, with great tithes commuted at the sum of £500 yearly, certain glebe lands and the sum of £25 consolidated £2½ per Cent. Annuities, standing in the name of the official trustee of charitable funds: under a scheme of the Charity Commissioners, dated Jan. 28th, 1870, the administration of the charity and the patronage are vested in trustees; this lectureship, yearly value £250, with residence, has been held since 1872 by the Rev. Hamilton Ashwin LL.D. of Trinity College, Dublin. The vicar has in his possession a list of the vicars of Dedham from the 14th century to the present time. There are Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels. Dunton's almshouses, founded in 1517 by Stephen Dunton, of Dedham, and endowed by William Littlebury in 1571 for old and decayed tradespeople, comprise 10 houses, now occupied by 15 persons, each of whom receives from 1s. to 1s. 6d. weekly, coals and wood being found free of charge. Barker's, founded in 1863 by Samuel Barker, of Bedford Square, London, a native of Dedham, for aged spinsters, have six inmates, each of whom receives 5s. weekly and medical attendance; there are six Chapel almshouses, founded in 1834, by Mrs. Mary Barfield, of Colchester, for six aged widows, each receiving 4s. 6d. weekly: Chapman's charity, derived from land at Ardleigh, let in 1890 at £50 was left in 1657 by John Chapman, of Dedham, and is distributed yearly: Betts' charity, of £15, left in 1825 by Edward Betts, of Dedham, is distributed yearly in coal to members of the Church of England for regular attendance at services. Dedham formerly had a market and in the reign of Richard II. and up to the end of the 16th century was famous as one of the chief seats of the clothing trade. Stour House, an Elizabethan mansion, built in 1868, and the seat of Mrs. Dunnett, is situated on the side of a hill, with a commanding and picturesque view of the vale of Dedham, the river Stour and the surrounding country. Dalethorpe, an ancient residence, the seat of James Dyer Tremlett esq. J.P. is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Stour. The Hill House, Dedham Park, the seat of Mrs. Mounsey, is a modern house. The Old House, the original building of Dedham Grammar school, dates from the time of Queen Elizabeth, and is the residence of Mrs. Penrose; Lower Park is the residence of W. W. Hewitt esq.; Birchwood of Robert S. Goodspeed esq.; Castle House of William Tinning esq.; Stonylands of Lt.-Col. R. S. Green J.P.; The Grove of Sir R. H. Lang K.C.M.G.; East House of H. N. Dunnett esq.; Ivy Lodge of Alfred Dunnage esq.; and Highlands of William Deason esq. There are two manors in the parish of Dedham, viz. Dedham Hall, attached to the Duchy of Lancaster, and Over Hall and Nether Hall, of which — Beaumont esq. of Colchester, is lord. The principal landowners are the trustees of William Herbert Dunnett, H. R. Edwards esq. J.P. of Southwold, William Nocton esq. of Langham, Lieut.-Col. Richard Spurgeon Green J.P. of Stonylands, William Deason esq. James Dyer Tremlett esq. J.P. and Messrs. Ebenezer Clover and W. W. Hewitt and Mr. Arthur Osborne, of Mistle. The soil is mixed, principally mild loam; subsoil, various. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The area is 2,559 acres of land and 9 of water; rateable value, £7,367; the population in 1901 was 1,500.

SCHOOLS.

The Royal Free Grammar School (now closed by order of the Charity Commissioners), was founded in 1571 by William Littlebury & chartered by Queen Elizabeth in 1574. The school called the "English school," founded in 1599, is now amalgamated with the Grammar school & a scheme for the administration of the foundation was confirmed in November, 1873, & came into effect in January, 1885, but it is unlikely that the school will be re-opened before 1910. An artesian well has been sunk upon the Grammar school property to a depth of 155 feet

LEYTON (or Low Leyton) is a parish pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Lee, from which its name was derived, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles from London, with two stations on the Great Eastern railway and one on the Midland, London, Tilbury and Southend railway, in the South Western division of the county, Becontree hundred, West Ham union, Bow county court district, rural deanery of North Barking, archdeaconry of Essex and diocese of St. Albans, and is within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court and Metropolitan Police. Leyton adjoins Walthamstow and Stratford, and includes the "slip" part of Wanstead; the district was extended by 38 and 39 Vict. c. cxiii. to include part of Wanstead. It was formerly governed by a Local Board of Health, formed under the Act 36 and 37 Vict. c. clxxxii. but under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1894," is now controlled by an Urban District Council of 27 members. The district is divided into nine wards. The parish is supplied with water by the East London Water Works, is lighted with gas by the Lea Bridge District Gas Co. and with the electric light from works in Cathall road, erected in 1896. The church of St. Mary is a plain structure of brick in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, two small porches, both on the south side, and a western tower containing a clock: all the windows are stained: in the chancel is a memorial to John Strype M.A. the celebrated historian and antiquary, who held this vicarage for 68 years and was buried here in Dec. 1737, at the age of 94: in the north aisle is the monument of Charles (Goring), 2nd and last Earl of Norwich, who died in 1670-1: in the tower is a monument to Sir Michael Hikes kt. of Ruckholts, who died there in 1612, and his wife Elizabeth (Colston), widow of Henry Parvis esq. of Ruckholts; the lower portion projects from the wall, and is panelled and adorned with heraldic achievements; on the top are effigies of both reclining on their elbows, with their feet together in the centre, and their heads outwards; a double arched screen, with inscriptions, rises at the back: here also is a similar but more lofty monument to Sir William Hicks bart. of Beverstone Castle, Glouc. ob. 9 Oct. 1680, with a reclining effigy in a court suit, wig and ruffles; and at either end standing figures of Margaret (Paget) his wife, and his son; there is a third monument to his son, Sir William Hicks bart. ob. 1703, and Martha Agnes (Coningsby) his wife, ob. 1723: here, too, was buried William Bowyer, the printer, d. 18 Nov. 1777, and Sir John Strange kt. Master of the Rolls, 1750-54, sometime M.P. for West Looe and Totnes, who died May 18th, 1754: there are brasses to Ursula Gasprey, ob. 1493, with two Latin verses; to Tobias Wood esq. and Eliza his wife, with 7 sons and 5 daughters, c. 1620; to Lady Mary, wife of Sir William Kyngestone, ob. 1557; and to Robert Rampstone, 1585, who left 20s. for the poor: near the vestry door is a mural tablet to Sir Robert Beachcroft kt. Lord Mayor, d. 1721; and there is a memorial to Sir Richard Hawkins, d. 1735: there are 800 sittings, of which 400 are free. The register of baptisms and marriages dates from the year 1575; burials, 1617. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £364, with 1 acre of glebe and residence, in the gift of Simeon's trustees, and held since 1900 by the Rev. James Theodore Inskip M.A. of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, and surrogate. St. Catherine's is an ecclesiastical district formed in 1894 from the mother parish of St. Mary. The church is a structure of brick in the Perpendicular style and consists of chancel, nave and aisles: there are 563 sittings. The registers date from 1894. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £297, in the gift of the vicar of Leyton, and held since 1894 by the Rev. John Kennedy F.S.A. Christ Church is an ecclesiastical district formed in 1904 from St. Catherine's, Leyton, and St. John's, Leytonstone. The church, in Francis road, is an edifice of brick in the Gothic style, and consists of nave only at present: there are sittings for 504 persons. The living is a perpetual curacy, net yearly value £120, in the gift of trustees, and held since 1904 by the Rev. Frederick James Sloan. All Saints is an ecclesiastical parish formed in Jan. 1886, out of Leyton and St. James', Walthamstow. The church, erected by subscription in 1864, at a cost of about £3,000, and consecrated Jan. 1865, as a chapel of ease to the parish church, is a plain cruciform building of brick and stone in the Decorated style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, transepts and a south porch: the east window and two others in the chancel are stained: these, together with the reredos of Caen stone and alabaster, were the gift of the Capper family. The register dates from the year 1881. The living is a perpetual curacy, net yearly value £303, chiefly derived from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and Queen Anne's Bounty, in the gift of the vicar of St. Mary's, and held since 1904 by the Rev. Edwin Davies, of St. Aidan's. Here is a Catholic church dedicated to St. Joseph, Baptist, Congregational, Primitive Methodist and Wesleyan chapels, a preaching room belonging to the Plymouth Brethren and a Salvation Army Hall. There is a Metropolitan police station in the Lea Bridge road, and a volunteer fire brigade with stations in Church road, Leyton, and High road, Leytonstone. Public Baths were erected in 1902 in Cathall road. The almshouses belonging to the London Master Bakers' Pension Society are in the Lea Bridge road, and in the Church road are eight almshouses, of flint and Beer stone, rebuilt in 1885 at the request of the Rev. James Lunt M.A. then vicar, on an improved plan, at the cost of the surviving members of the family of the late Mr. John Hibbert. There are charities producing £77 yearly, distributed in bread. Leyton was a Roman settlement and is supposed to be the site of the ancient Durolitum mentioned by Antoninus; many Roman antiquities, including the foundations of buildings, mortised timber, a subterranean arched gateway, wells and coins, both brass and silver, of the Consular and Imperial times, together with some silver Saxon pieces, were discovered in 1718, in the vicinity of the Manor house. Sir Thomas Roe, of Magdalen College, Oxford, an oriental traveller and diplomatist and M.P. for Oxford University in 1640, was born here in 1580, and knighted at Whitehall, July 23rd, 1603; in 1614 he was sent as ambassador to the Great Mogul, and in 1621 to the Sultan of Turkey; he died 6 Nov. 1644. The parish contains several fine old houses: Eltoe House, long the residence of the late Cardinal Wiseman (d. 15 Feb. 1865), is in Church road; Ruckholt House was formerly the seat of the Hicks family. The Rev. John Pardoe B.A. rector of Gravelly, Herts, is lord of the manor; the principal landowners are Earl Cowley and Samuel Courthope Bosanquet esq. of Dingestow Court, Monmouth. The Town Hall, situate in High road, and adjoining the old Town Hall, now used as a public library, is a structure of red brick with stone dressings, and was opened 18th March, 1896, by T.R.H. the Prince and Princess of Wales, then Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York. The Public Library, opened in 1893, occupies the old Town hall. The Carnegie Library, situate in Lea Bridge road, was erected in 1905-6. The area of the Urban district is:—Low Leyton civil parish, 2,359 acres of land and 12 of water; Cann Hall civil parish, 223 acres; total, 2,594 acres; rateable value: Low Leyton, £412,636; of Cann Hall, £67,808. The population in 1901 was: Low Leyton, 76,680; Cann Hall, 22,232; total, 98,912. The population of the wards in 1901 was:—Cann Hall, 12,801; Grove Green, 13,066; Harrow Green, 15,169; Lea Bridge, 16,615; Leyton, 17,305; Leytonstone, 14,525; Wanstead Slip, 9,431.

KNOTTS GREEN and LEA BRIDGE are the names of localities in the parish, formerly regarded as hamlets; at the latter is a station on the Great Eastern railway.

At RUCKHOLTS, obscured by trees, are the remains of ancient entrenchments, with a square double embankment, 100 feet in diameter, secured by a moat.

STRATFORD (or Stratford Langthorne), the ford of the street or Roman way from London to Colchester, within the Northern division of the Parliamentary borough of West Ham, and also included in the municipal and county borough of West Ham, is a suburb of London and lies on the east side of the navigable river Lea and on the Great Eastern railway, whence the Colchester, the Cambridge, the Blackwall and North Woolwich, the Woodford and the Tilbury and Southend lines of railway diverge: there are three stations, viz.: Stratford central station, Stratford Market and Maryland Point: it is 3 miles from Shoreditch, in the Bow county court district, West Ham union, and in the rural deanery of West Barking, archdeaconry of Essex and diocese of St. Albans. It is in the eastern metropolitan postal district, and within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal court and Metropolitan police, and is united to Stratford-le-Bow, in Middlesex, by a bridge over the river Lea: tramways are laid down from the Broadway to Aldgate and from the Broadway to Leytonstone and along the Romford road. Stratford, formerly included in the local board district of West Ham, is now a ward of the municipal borough of West Ham, created June, 1886.

Under the powers conferred by a Local Act of 1898 the Borough Council of West Ham have acquired the horse tramways in the borough, which have been converted into electric tramways, and are now worked by the Council.

St. John's is an ecclesiastical parish formed August 20, 1844, from the mother parish of West Ham: the church, situated in the centre of the town, where the main road from the east of London diverges towards Romford and Leytonstone, was built in 1834 as a chapel of ease to the parish of West Ham, and became a parish church about 1859; it is a building of stone and brick in the Early English style, and was erected at a cost of £23,000, of which £18,000 was raised by subscription and the remainder advanced on security of the rates; the church consists of chancel, nave, aisles, north and south porches and an embattled western tower with pinnacles, containing a clock and one bell: the site was given by the 4th Earl of Mornington, then Tyney Long Wellesley Pole (d. 1857), of Wanstead, and T. Humphreys esq. lords of the manor: there are sittings for 1,000 persons. The register dates from the year 1859. The living is a vicarage, so constituted in 1868, net yearly value £320, with residence, in West Ham lane, in the gift of the vicar of West Ham, and held since 1904 by the Rev. Giles, and was opened July 7th, 1859, by Sir Thomas S. Western bart. lord lieutenant of the county. In 1886 the building was greatly enlarged and entirely redecorated: the large hall on the first floor will hold 1,000 people and has retiring rooms attached: there is also a minor hall or board room on the ground floor. The façade towards the Broadway, 102 feet in length, has two principal storeys, from which in front of the entrance is projected a colonnade of rusticated work, rising into a spacious balcony supported on columns and terminating in a balustrated parapet, with groups of statuary: above this is a supplementary storey similarly treated: to the right of the main building is a well-proportioned tower 100 feet in height, crowned by a coved domical roof, supporting a small turret and vane: the principal front is of stone, the portico and other portions being adorned with polished columns of red granite: this building is occupied by the officers of the corporation, engineer and surveyor, vestry clerk and of various local collectors: on the west side is a fire brigade station, and a building has been erected at the back for the use of the inspector of nuisances and his staff, and includes a residence for the superintendent of the fire brigade.
