THE Proprietors, in submitting to their Subscribers and the Public the present (being the Ninth) Edition of the SIX HOME COUNTIES DIRECTORY, trust that it may be found equal in accuracy to the previous Editions.

The contents are similar to those in previous editions—a general account is given of each County; Lists of Hundreds and Poor Law Unions are included, and also the Polling Places appointed pursuant to “The Ballot Act, 1872;” and the Proprietors have been able, for the first time, to add a sketch of the Geological Features of each County, for which they are indebted to Mr. W. J. Harrison, of the Museum, Leicester. Then follows a List of the Places in each County, alphabetically arranged, with their Inhabitants, both Private Residents and Commercial; it is stated under each Parish in what Hundred, Union, and County Court District and Division of the County, as also in what Diocese, Archdeaconry, and Rural Deanery, it is situate; and the College and University of every Beneficed Clergyman have been given, as far as they can be ascertained. Very extensive alterations have taken place in the Ecclesiastical Jurisdictions of these Counties since the previous edition—the new Diocese of St. Albans has been formed, comprising ~~the~~ ~~the~~ Counties of Essex and Herts—the Diocese of Rochester has been greatly changed, giving up the new Diocese of St. Albans and receiving in exchange parts of those of London and Winchester, the parts so added forming the new Archdeaconry of Southwark: there have also been many changes in the Rural Deaneries of Surrey: all these have been duly recorded in this edition.

The Post Office Savings Banks and Government Annuity and Insurance Offices have been noticed; the names of the Parish Clerks are given under each Parish; lists of Farm Bailiffs of Gentlemen farming their own land are inserted; the population of each place, from the Census of 1871, is inserted throughout; and the new lines of Railway, both completed and in course of construction, have been laid down on the Maps, which have been enlarged and corrected up to the present date.

The value of the Directory, however, will depend on the fact that it has been most carefully corrected, every parish having been personally visited by the Agents.

The bulk of the Directory has again increased very considerably; the Fifth Edition had increased to 1,986 pages; the Sixth to 2,290 pages; the Seventh to 2,764 pages; the Eighth contained 2,944 pages; and the present 3,314 pages: notwithstanding this last increase, no further addition has been made to the price. In consequence of the great bulk of the Volume it is not proposed to again include the Six Counties in One Volume, but the Three Northern and the Three Southern Counties will in future be published in two separate volumes.

The Proprietors have again to return their thanks to those Clergymen, Magistrates' Clerks, Registrars, and other Gentlemen, who have assisted the Agents while collecting the information.

ESSEX

ESSEX is one of the metropolitan shires and takes its name from the commonwealth of the East Saxons (one of the English hordes which settled in South Britain), and of which Middlesex, London and Hertfordshire afterwards formed part. After the Euskardians and Celts had been driven out Essex was held by the Belgic tribe of the Trinobantes until the Roman inroad. Of the Romans it was a great seat and here was their city of Camulodunum. The Welch, again becoming masters, were driven out by the East Saxons. The chief clans concerned in the settlement were the Tilling, Halling, Denning, Thurring, Benning, Billing, Horning, Manning, Totting, Bucking and Dunning, being the same as those engaged in the settlement of East Anglia. In 823 it came under the sway of the West Saxons under Egbert, though more than once given up to the Danes. In the great Civil War Essex sided with the Parliament and formed a powerful federation.

The shire is of an irregular shape, being in its greatest length, from north-east to south-west, 63 miles; it contains 1,533 square miles, or 1,055,133 acres, being the tenth English shire for size. In 1871 its population was 466,436, being an increase of 61,602 over 1861: males, 233,903; females, 232,533; the number of inhabited houses in 1871 was 92,356. On the east and south-east the county is bounded by the North Sea; on the south by the Thames, which flows between it and Kent; on the west by the Lee against Middlesex and by the Stort against Hertfordshire; on the north by Cambridge and on the north-east by the Stour, separating it from Suffolk. Thus there is a navigable belt from Sudbury round by sea and so to Bishop's Stortford. On the east the shore is broken by the deep friths and creeks of the Stour, Colne, Blackwater, Crouch and Thames. The Thames flows from London to the North Sea, having several quays, but no great haven on the Essex shore. The Lee, and its head, the Stort, are navigable, passing through Bishop's Stortford, Harlow and Waltham Abbey. The Roding rises in Easton Park, near Dunmow, and flows south for about 36 miles past Ongar to Ilford, where it becomes navigable and, passing Barking, joins the Thames. The Bourne brook, 12 miles long, falls into the Thames at Dagenham: the Ingerbourne rises in South Weald and falls into the Thames near Rainham: the Marditch, 12 miles long, forms a creek at Purfleet: the Crouch, 25 miles long, waters south-east Essex and is navigable from Hull Bridge to the North Sea; Burnham is its port: the Broomhill is a creek, 10 miles long, and navigable for 7 miles to near Rochford: the river Chelmer, 46 miles long, rising in the north-west near Debden and flowing south, passes Dunmow and Chelmsford, where it is made navigable, thence east to Maldon (its port), receiving the Ter, 13 miles long, the Wid and Cann, 14 miles long and the Sandon Brook, 10 miles long; near Maldon it joins the Blackwater, which has for its feeder the Podsbrook:

the Colne, 35 miles long, rises on the northern border near Birdbrook, becomes navigable at Colchester and receiving the Roman river, flows into the North Sea: the Holland creek falls into the North Sea at Little Holland: the Stour is about 50 miles long, becomes navigable at Sudbury and passes the ports of Manningtree and Harwich to the North Sea: in the north-west the Cam and Slade brooks pass into Cambridgeshire.

The shire has much rich meadow ground on the shores of the brooks and marsh lands on the friths and creeks. On the shore are many marsh islands, like those of Holland; of these Canvey, Foulness, Wallasea, Mersea, Horsea, Havengore and Potton are the greatest. Much of the shore is sheltered against the tides and storms by dykes and sea walls. The inland is hilly and well timbered. The highest hills of the London clay are High Beech, near Waltham Abbey, 760 feet high; Danbury, 700 feet high; Tiptree Heath, near Witham, 700 feet high and Laindon Hills, 620 feet high.

Essex, of which Chelmsford is the assize town, is included within the South-Eastern Circuit. Part of Becontree hundred, viz. Barking, East Ham, West Ham, Little Ilford, Low Leyton, Walthamstow, Wanstead, St. Mary Woodford and Chingford is within the bounds of the Central Criminal Court, and with Dagenham, Chadwell Heath, Waltham Abbey, Loughton and Chigwell, under the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan Police.

The shire is ecclesiastically within the recently formed diocese of St. Albans and divided into the two archdeaconries of Colchester and Essex, except Ballingdon, a suburb of Sudbury in Suffolk, which is in the diocese of Ely. The Ven. Canon Blomfield, M.A. vicar of Barking, is the archdeacon of Essex, and the Ven. William Brice Ady, M.A. rector of Little Baddow, is archdeacon of Colchester.

There are several good towns, as Colchester, Chelmsford, Braintree, Harwich, Maldon, Barking, Saffron Walden, Witham, Halstead, Romford and Brentwood, besides market and small towns and about 400 parishes. There are no cathedrals or great endowments.

The county, for parliamentary purposes, was formerly in two divisions, but by "The Representation of the People Act, 1867," it was divided into three, called respectively North-west, North-east and South. "The Boundary Act, 1868," altered the names of the first two to West and East; each of the three divisions sends two members to Parliament: the divisions contain the following hundreds:—Eastern—Dengie, Hinckford, Lexden, Tendring, Thurstable, Winstree and Witham; Southern—Barstable, Becontree, Chafford, Rochford and the liberty of Havering; Western—Chelmsford, Clavering, Dunmow, Freshwell, Harlow, Ongar, Uttlesford and Waltham.

There are three Parliamentary boroughs:—Colchester, returning two members; Harwich and Maldon formerly returned two members, but by "The Representation of the People Act, 1867," they now return but one each.

The shire forms nineteen hundreds and one liberty. The following is a list of the hundreds, with the places included in each.

The Essex men are mostly employed in husbandry and stock feeding, and only a few in manufactures of silk, &c. at Braintree and Halstead; there is a silk mill at Chelmsford and one at Colchester. The minerals worked are chalk for lime, septaria for Roman cement, clay for bricks, flint for guns, and salt made from the sea. Seeds are grown in various parts. The trade of the towns on the shores is in the oyster and other fisheries, and in shipping corn, coals and timber. The Colne fishery is of great value and importance; it furnishes the finest native oysters, and belongs to Colchester. The seaports of the county are Manningtree, Harwich, Brightlingsea, Colchester, Salecott, Maldon, Bradwell, Burnham, Wakering, Southend, Leigh, Grays, Purfleet and Barking. The Victoria Docks are in Plaistow Level, and a line connects Thames Haven with the Tilbury line. Steamers run from London to Harwich, and communicate with Purfleet, Grays, Tilbury, Southend and Walton: Southend and Tilbury are steamboat stations; the boats only run between London and Southend during the summer months. Steamers go up the Orwell from Harwich to Ipswich. Harwich, Southend, Walton and Clacton are bathing places. At Waltham Abbey there are Government powder works, and at Purfleet, powder stores; at Warley there is a depot for recruits; at Tilbury, a garrison; at Colchester is a large camp, and at Shoeburyness an extensive ground for testing Government artillery of the largest calibre.

The railways of Essex belong to the Great Eastern system: one great branch, under the name of the Cambridge line, going from London north, by Stratford, Waltham Abbey, Hoddesdon (with branches to Hertford and Buntingford), Bishop's Stortford and Saffron Walden, to Cambridge, Newmarket and the East of England; and the other north-east, by the Eastern Union line, by Ilford, Romford, Brentwood, Ingatestone, Chelmsford, Witham, Colchester and Manningtree, to Ipswich and Norwich, with branches to Maldon, Braintree and Dunmow, Sudbury and Bury St. Edmunds, Harwich and Hadleigh (Suffolk); between these two lines is the line through Leyton, Leytonstone, with branch to Walthamstow and Clingford, Woodford, Buckhurst Hill, Loughton, and Epping to Ongar. In the south-west, a short line runs from Stratford to the Victoria Docks and North Woolwich, on the Thames, and another from Stratford to Barking, Purfleet, Grays, Tilbury (from which is a ferry to Gravesend), Leigh and Southend. The Tendring Hundred railway runs from Colchester to Wivenhoe, Brightlingsea and Walton-on-the-Naze. In the north there is also the Colne Valley railway, commencing at the Chapel Junction, on the Sudbury branch line, and passing through Halstead and Castle Hedingham to Haverhill, Suffolk. Connection with the Northern and Midland railways is effected via Peterborough.

The Essex and Colchester Hospital stands on the Lexden road, to the westward of the town of Colchester, on rising ground; it is a handsome white brick building and possesses good accommodation for patients; it is supported by yearly subscriptions, donations and bequests, and has been much enlarged: Lord Carlingford, president; William Howard and Phillip Wright, auditors; C. R. Bree, M.D., F.L.S. and Alexander Wallace, M.D. physicians; W. Waylen and J. H. Partridge, consulting surgeons; R. S. Nunn, R. F. Symmons, and H. Laver, surgeons; William Buck, dentist; M. G. Biggs, house surgeon; Charles E. Bland, secretary; Miss Elizabeth Robertson, matron.

The Eastern Counties Asylum, for the care and training of idiots and imbeciles belonging to Essex, Suffolk, Norfolk and Cambridgeshire, is at Essex Hall, Colchester: the patients are admitted free for five years, by the votes of subscribers, at half-yearly elections; and a certain number are elected free for life; patients from all parts of the kingdom are also admitted by payment; it is fitted up with baths, a gymnastic apparatus and workshops; an additional building has been erected upon the grounds, which accommodates 24 patients requiring special attention on account of their bodily infirmities; a commodious infirmary has also been erected; the whole property is now the freehold of the board; Sir Edward Kerrison, bart. chairman; Rear Admiral Luard, C.B. vice-chairman; John Bawtree, esq. treasurer; Frederic Bateman, M.D., F.R.C.P. and Roger Sturley Nunn, esq. consulting surgeons; Robert F. Symmons, medical officer; John J. C. Turner, secretary; Miss Ann Jones, matron.

The County Lunatic Asylum is situated on a fine eminence, about three-quarters of a mile from the Brentwood station, and is seen from the Great Eastern Railway: it is in the Elizabethan style, richly decorated and will contain about 800 patients; in 1864 three additional blocks of building were erected, which accommodate 75 more patients; and in 1871 another block for 250 female patients: the wards are spacious and airy and many command an extensive and beautiful prospect: the building is approached from the Warley road by a carriage drive; the grounds by which it is surrounded present, on a small scale, a park-like appearance; there are upwards of 110 acres of land connected with the asylum, part appropriated as a cemetery and the remainder laid out as a farm and kitchen garden and pleasure grounds; the farm and garden are cultivated by the patients; visiting days first and third thursdays in each month: Donald Cosmo Campbell, M.D. superintendent; Rev. Joseph Sowter, A.R.C. chaplain; Charles Rayner, steward and clerk; Thomas M. Gepp, Chelmsford, clerk to visitors.

Chelmsford Gaol, Springfield hill, Capt. Hy. McCorry, governor; C. H. Nicholas, deputy governor; Rev. W. Faithfull Lumley, chaplain

GEOLOGY OF ESSEX.

THE rocks of Essex have attracted a fair amount of attention from geological observers. The Government Geological Survey has published colored maps of the southern half of the county, prepared by Messrs. Whitaker, Dalton, Penning and others, and the examination of the northern portion is also, we believe, completed, although the maps are not yet quite ready for issue: on these maps the various layers or strata of rock are laid down with the utmost accuracy, and indicated by means of various colors.

The geology of the southern portion bordering on the Thames and Lee has been described by Mr. W. Whitaker in his "Geology of the London Basin," and the same author has also published a description of the strata in the north-eastern corner of the county, round Harwich and the Naze. Numerous papers by Professor Owen, Messrs. Brown, Mitchell, Clarke, Charlesworth, Searles, V. Wood, Harmer, Penning, Prestwich, &c. have appeared in the Journal of the Geological Society and the Geological Magazine. The deposits at Grays and Ilford are favorite hunting grounds of the members of the Geologists' Association, and have frequently been described in their Proceedings.

Geological Formations in Essex:—The county affords a fair diversity of rocks. The strata rest one upon the other with a general inclination or dip to the south-east: a consequence of this is that the lowest (and therefore oldest) beds crop up and occupy the surface in the north-west of the county, and here accordingly we find the white chalk or upper cretaceous strata. Resting upon the chalk, but formed at a much later period, is the lowest tertiary stratum, known as the Woolwich and Reading beds, above which comes the London clay, and lastly the sandy Bagshot beds. Subsequent comparatively recent deposits of boulder-clay, sand, brick-earth, gravel &c. repose irregularly upon the eroded edges of the true rock-masses enumerated above.

THE CRETACEOUS FORMATION.—Commencing then with the beds of chalk which we have already stated to be the lowest and oldest of the strata which form the county of Essex, we find in the north-west of the county hilly and undulating ground, which presents, though in a less marked manner, the characteristic features of the downs of the south of England. This chalk district extends from the north and west boundaries of the county as far south as a line drawn through Bishop's Stortford, Castle Hedingham, and Sudbury: it is only along the boundary line with Cambridgeshire, however, that the chalk hills make any feature in the landscape, or that we find the white earthy limestone known as chalk actually forming the surface. The Royston downs rise to a height of 400 feet, and from this point to Linton and Haverhill the average height is between 300 and 400 feet. The top of the Rivey, a hill just outside the county near Linton, is 325 feet above the river Cam and 365 above the sea level. The Lower Chalk is exposed along the western slope of this low escarpment and along the valleys of the little streams that run northwards into the Cam.

The Upper Chalk is distinguished by the presence of numerous layers of flints, which are absent or rare in the beds below. A microscopical examination of chalk reveals the fact that it is almost entirely composed of minute shells of foraminifera, a low class of animals which are, even now, forming a deposit very similar to chalk on the bed of the North Atlantic Ocean. The chalk dips to the south-east and undoubtedly underlies the whole of Essex, rising again to the surface on the south of the Thames to form the hills known as the North Downs; one little patch, however, crops out in the south of the county between Purfleet and Grays Thurrock; here it is largely worked for the manufacture of "whiting," and the flint nodules are employed in making porcelain. Numerous fossils, as sea-urchins of the genera Ananchytes, Micraster, and Galerites, shells, as Terebratula carnea, Inoceramus &c. and in fact all the ordinary fossils of the Upper Chalk, are fairly plentiful. At Grays the chalk has been proved by boring to be about 680 feet thick and at Harwich 888 feet.

THE TERTIARY PERIOD.—The chalk was probably deposited at the bottom of a rather deep ocean, and was hardened, elevated to form dry land, eroded, and again depressed, before the next bed of rock was deposited upon its surface. Evidently then there must have been a great interval of time between the two, and proofs of this interval are further furnished by the fact that the fossils found in the beds we are now going to describe are of an entirely different nature to those of the chalk, showing that a complete change in the life existing in this region of the earth had taken place. Here then geologists draw one of their great boundary lines, placing the chalk with certain beds beneath it, in a group denominated the Secondary, beds lower still (coal, slate, &c.) are known as Primary, but the newer higher strata are denominated Tertiary, or third in order of the stratified rocks.

The lowest Tertiary strata are known as the Eocene Formation, and are subdivided into—

(1.) The Thanet Sands.—Resting on the mass of chalk near Grays we find 20 or 30 feet of fine light-coloured sands, in which few or no fossils occur; they rest on a layer of green-coated flints known to the workmen as the "Bull-head Bed." Mr. Whitaker has lately shown that the Thanet Sands also occur at Ballingdon, a suburb of Sudbury, where they are 15 feet thick, and from this point they may extend along the edge of the chalk to Bishop's Stortford.

(2.) The Woolwich and Reading Beds.—These are mottled clays and sands, also seen at Sudbury, above the Thanet sands: thence they run by Shalford and Easton park to the south of Stortford, where they are well exposed in several brickyards. In South Essex they run from Wennington by Orsett to Stanford. Their thickness is about 40 feet.

(3.) The Blackheath (or Oldhaven) beds also occur near Orsett: they are composed of well-rolled flint pebbles embedded in sand, and are only a few feet thick. Mr. Bristow remarks "at Hassenbrooke, east of Orsett, the farmer has some very productive strawberry beds, and the fruit, well-known for its good quality, fetches a high price. I was told that the produce of 12 acres fetches £100 a week in Covent Garden Market, a price much above what the neighbouring growers can get. The explanation of this difference in quality is, I believe, that the sandy pebble-bed upon which these strawberries are grown makes a soil especially favourable for their cultivation, and that good gardening has little to do with the matter."

(4.) The London Clay.—This is the chief Essex formation. When we descend the gentle eastern slope of the chalk, we see before us a second escarpment, rising in low hills to heights of between 200 and 300 feet above the sea. The lowest portion of the northern slope is composed of the Reading beds, but on the top and stretching thence right away to the mouth of the Thames and the North Sea we find beds of stiff brownish and bluish clays, in which layers of septaria occur: the latter are rounded masses of impure carbonate of lime, usually traversed by cracks, which are filled up with crystals of the same material. In the south east of Essex the London clay is 480 feet thick, but it thins out considerably as we follow it westwards. Near Harwich the London clay was formerly worked for the septaria, which were used in the manufacture of cement. Here too it contains numerous small nodules of iron pyrites, which are still collected on the beach near Walton, for the manufacture of copperas, to the amount of about 150 tons per annum. At many places in Essex the London clay is worked for the manufacture of bricks, and sections may be seen near Brentwood Railway Station, Galleywood, Ingatestone, Maldon &c.

There is a spring at Hockley, the water of which, like much of that from the London clay, contains sulphate of magnesia (Epsom Salts). An endeavour was made some years ago to construct a "spa" with "pump rooms," and a woman was employed to dispense the waters whose strong healthy appearance visitors were led to believe was the result of their medicinal effects. In spite, however, of such a strong corroboration of the efficacy of the Hockley waters, the public refused to be cured, and the speculation proved a failure; all that now remains of the spa being the buildings which are still known as "Hockley Spa." Teazles grow well on the London clay, and also the elm, oak and ash.

(5.) The Bagshot Beds.—These sandy unfossiliferous strata only occur as outlying patches in the southern half of the county: they contain pebble beds formed of well-rolled flints only, and are about 25 feet thick: their position is invariably on the high ground and hill-tops, and springs issue from their junction with the London Clay below: they occur at High Beech, on the hill of Havering-atte-Bower, and there is a rather large mass which stretches southwards from Shenfield by Brentwood to Warley Common: they form the upper layers of the Brentwood brickfields, are also exposed in the railway cutting there, and the pebble beds have been extensively dug on Warley Common: other patches occur near Frierning, Stock, Galleywood Common, and Rayleigh: they also form the upper part of Langdon Hill, which rises to a height of 388 feet, and can be seen from long distances.

Now the five divisions of the Tertiary Epoch which we have described, viz., the (1) Thanet, (2) Reading, (3) Blackheath, (4) London Clay, and (5) Bagshot beds, are considered by geologists to form the lowest division of the Eocene formation. After the deposition of the Bagshot beds, the area seems to have been elevated so as to become dry land; at all events, there are no traces in Essex of strata of Upper Eocene age, nor of the succeeding Miocene period, which we find well represented in the Isle of Wight and on the Continent.

PLIOCENE FORMATION.—In the Eocene beds only a very few of the fossil shells (about  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent.) are identical with species now living: in the Pliocene strata, on the contrary, we find in the lowest beds that one-half of the fossil shells belong to living species, while in the upper portion nine-tenths are precisely similar to existing forms. These Pliocene beds only occur in the eastern counties, where they have received the name of "crag," from the Celtic word creggan, a shell, in allusion to the fact that the beds are almost made up of a mass of comminuted shells.

The Red Crag.—The Lower, White, or Coralline Crag does not occur in Essex, so that the Red Crag rests upon the London clay: it only occurs in the north-east corner, where it is well exposed in the fine cliff sections at Walton Naze. Here we see it to be a coarse, reddish brown and grey sand, full of shells, and showing much false bedding. Harwich Cliff had also once a capping of Red Crag, but this has been removed by the encroachment of the sea. Of shell-fish, 148 species have been obtained from Walton, of which 75 are Mediterranean species, showing probably a rather warmer climate than at present.

Coprolite Bed.—At the base of the Red Crag we find a layer of phosphatic nodules, whose valuable fertilizing properties were first pointed out by the late Professor Henslow: this bed is worked at Wrabness, Little Oakley &c. and about 5,000 tons altogether of these coprolites have been raised in Essex.

Chillesford Beds.—At the Naze we see 6 or 7 feet of sandy clay resting on the Red Crag, which may possibly belong to these beds.

PLEISTOCENE FORMATION.—The Drift or Glacial Beds.—Beds of Upper Pliocene age found in Norfolk and Suffolk give plain indications that a colder climate was beginning to prevail. The Mediterranean shells disappear, and are replaced by Arctic forms: still later we enter on a period of severe cold, when icebergs detached from glaciers, which then covered all the north of England and the whole of Scandinavia, came sailing southwards laden with rocks detached from the land over which they rubbed, or the glaciers themselves may have pushed southwards as far as Cambridge and Suffolk: the Lower Boulder clay then formed does not occur in Essex: here the first glacial deposits are pebbly gravels and sands—the Mid-glacial Beds: these may mark a temporary diminution in the cold, together with a subsidence of the land: they are overlaid and overlapped by the Upper or Chalky Boulder clay, which reaches southwards to the northern edge of the Thames Valley. Thus it is spread as a surface covering over all the stratified rocks of Essex, except along the bottoms of the river valley, where it has been washed away, exposing the Mid-glacial gravels beneath: it is a stiff clayey mass of a brownish hue, full of chalk-pebbles, flints and pieces of rock, containing, too, numerous fossils brought from afar: it often forms a stumbling-block to the young geologist, who fails to distinguish it from the stratified rocks which it conceals.

Post-Glacial Beds.—The valleys were probably filled up during the Glacial period, and have since been re-excavated by the rivers which now occupy them. Most of the material so removed has been swept out to the sea; but here and there along the river's course we find beds of fine loam or brick-earth, and again beds of gravel or sand, at varying heights, which have been deposited by the streams at different periods. The brick-earths at Stratford, Ilford, Grays, Copford &c. have yielded numerous remains of fresh water mollusca, mainly such as still inhabit the adjoining district. At Grays, however, a shell known as Cyrena fluminalis occurs, which is now only known in the Nile. Bones and teeth of the mammoth, of a rhinoceros, hippopotamus and other extinct species also occur in these brick-earths. A very fine collection of the teeth, bones &c. of these extinct mammals, made at Ilford by Sir Antonio Brady, has lately been presented by him to the British Museum.

Extensive deposits of sand and mud occur all along the Essex coast, from Shoeburyness to Harwich. At Clacton stumps of trees forming a submerged forest are to be seen at low water, which indicate a subsidence of the coast-line. The slope of the land as it passes under the sea is a very gentle one, and indeed the deepest part of the North Sea between Essex and Holland is only 180 feet, so that a very slight elevation would suffice to render England again, as it has several times been: since the deposit of the Eocene beds, a part of the continent of Europe.

Does Coal exist beneath Essex?—It has been pointed out by Messrs. Prestwich, Godwin-Austen and others, that the coal beds of Belgium pass westwards to near Calais, trending in a direction which if continued would bring them underneath the south of England to the Somerset and Bristol coal fields, which are supposed to be a continuation of them, as the coal seams are much alike in quality, number and thickness. Now a well-boring at Harwich struck dark slaty rocks which we know to lie beneath the coal, at a depth of 1,026 feet, and these rocks had a rather high inclination towards the south. Borings at Kentish Town (1,114 feet) and Meux's Brewery in London (1,000 feet) show on that side also old rocks with apparently a northerly dip. Now between these, and consequently underneath Essex, it is highly probable that a coal basin occurs, hidden deep down under about 1,500 feet of chalk and Eocene strata. This is a most important question for the landowners of Essex, and it is highly desirable that a boring should be made at some suitable point to test the question.

Pre-historic Man.—Several examples have been found in Essex of the flint and stone implements used by the early inhabitants of this country, when as yet metals were unknown. A chipped flint celt or axe, 9 inches long and  $3\frac{1}{4}$  broad, was found at Blunt's Hill, near Witham: another specimen, ground at the edge, and  $6\frac{1}{2}$  inches long, occurred at Stifford, near Gray's Thurrock: the same spot also yielded a perforated stone hammer, circular in outline and 3 inches in diameter. At Audley End, a stone pestle like a small club,  $9\frac{1}{2}$  inches long, was found in a gravel pit, with a Roman cinerary urn. A remarkably large flint chip or flake, was found in digging the foundations of a house on Windmill Hill, Saffron Walden: Mr. John Evans remarks concerning this specimen: "One face is somewhat flatter than the other, but both faces are dexterously and symmetrically chipped over their whole surface. The small flakes have been taken off so skilfully and at such regular intervals, that, so far as workmanship is concerned, this instrument approaches in character the elegant Danish blades. The form seems well adapted for a lance head, but on examination the edges appear to be slightly chipped and worn away, as if by scraping some hard material. It would appear then more probably to have been used in the hand." At Great Easton, near Dunmow, a flint pick or chisel has been found, and a perforated axe-head made of greenstone near Colchester. Such were the tools and weapons used by our predecessors in this country up to perhaps 5,000 or 6,000 years ago, when the use of metals was discovered. Doubtless many more specimens would be found if gravel pits and other excavations were watched by intelligent observers.

DEDHAM is a town and parish in the Eastern division of the county, Lexden union and hundred, Colchester county court district, Dedham rural deanery, Colchester archdeaconry and St. Albans diocese, mentioned in "Domesday Survey," on the navigable river Stour, which separates it from Suffolk, 7 miles north-north-east from Colchester, 4 west from Manningtree, 11 south-west from Ipswich, 58 from London and 3 from the Ardleigh station on the Eastern Union railway. The town consists of one street, and is situated in a picturesque valley. The church of the Virgin Mary is a handsome building, in the Perpendicular style, having chancel, nave, aisles, and a fine tower containing 8 bells. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £170, in the gift of the Duchy of Lancaster and held by the Rev. Alfred William Mason, M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. There is also a lectureship, endowed with great tithes, held by the Rev. Hamilton Ashwin, LL.D. of Dublin. In this parish there are two endowed schools: the Free Grammar School, founded in 1571, by William Littlebury, and chartered by Queen Elizabeth in 1575, of which the Rev. Gerald Thomson Lermitt, M.A., LL.D. of St. John's College, Cambridge, is the head master; the number of foundation scholars is limited to 20, who are appointed by the governors, with the advice of the head master; exhibitions are attached to this school for pupils proceeding to St. John's College, Cambridge, value £90; boys residing in the parishes of Dedham, Ardleigh, Great Bromley and Bradfield in the county of Essex, and Stratford St. Mary in the county of Suffolk, are alone eligible; the yearly income is about £379; the other, called the English school, was founded in the year 1610. There is also a National school. The Congregationalists have a chapel here. Dedham formerly had a market, and in the reign of Richard II. was famous as one of the chief seats of the clothing trade. There are 12 almshouses, called Dunton's, for old and decayed tradespeople; Barker's, for aged spinners; and the Chapel Almshouses, for aged widows; Chapman's Charity, of £67, distributed yearly; and Betts' Charity, of £20, distributed yearly in coal to the poor. A fair is held on Easter Tuesday. There is an assembly-room.

Stour House, the seat of William Herbert Dunnnett, esq., is situated on the side of a hill, having a commanding and picturesque view of the vale of Dedham, the river Stour, and surrounding country; it was built by the present owner in the year 1868, in the Elizabethan style; the interior is beautifully fitted up. Dedham Park, the seat of Hatfield James Back, esq. is a modern house situated in extensive grounds. The manor of Dedham Hall belongs to the Duchy of Lancaster, and Francis Smythies, esq. is lord of the manor of Over Hall and Nether Hall. The principal land-owners are the Eyre family, Thomas L'Estrange Ewen, J.P. Hatfield James Back, William Herbert Dunnnett and H. R. Edwards, esqrs. The soil is mixed; subsoil, various. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The area is 2,551 acres; rateable value, £8,018 15s.; and the population in 1871 was 1,916.

LEYTON (or LOW LEYTON) is a parish, in the Southern division of the county, Becontree hundred, rural deanery of Barking, archdeaconry of Essex and diocese of St. Albans, West Ham union, Bow county court district, and the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court and Metropolitan Police,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  miles from London, and is a station on the Great Eastern railway: it is governed by a Local Board of Health, consisting of 15 members: it adjoins Walthamstow and Stratford, and is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Lee, from which its name was derived: it was a Roman establishment, supposed to be the site of the ancient Durolitum; many Roman antiquities have been discovered, as foundations of buildings, a subterranean arched gateway and coins. The church of St. Mary is a plain brick building, consisting of chancel, nave, north and south aisle, and has sittings for 800 persons: it contains tombs of Strype, the antiquary, who was vicar here for 60 years, and died 1737, Goring, Earl of Norwich, Sir Michael Hickee and others. The register dates from the year 1575. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £450, with residence, in the gift of and held by the Rev. Edward Jones Brewster, M.A. of St. Mary Hall, Oxford. All Saints church was erected by subscription in 1864, and consecrated January, 1865; it cost about £2,500. Here are National schools for boys, girls and infants, a chapel for Wesleyans, and a metropolitan police station in the Lea Bridge road; also almshouses of the London Masters Bakers' Pension Society, and charities producing £77 yearly, distributed in bread. Sir Thomas Roe, an oriental traveller, was born here in 1580. The Rev. John Pardoe is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area is 2,272 acres; rateable value, £30,702; the population in 1861 was 4,794; and in 1871, 10,394, of which 4,914 are in Leytonstone.

KNOTTS GREEN and Lea Bridge are the names of localities in the parish, which were formerly treated as hamlets; at the latter is a station on the Great Eastern railway.

At RUCKHOLTS, obscured by trees, are the remains of ancient entrenchments, with a square double embankment, 100 feet in diameter, secured by a moat.

Parish Clerk, David Sayer.

LEYTONSTONE is a hamlet of Leyton, and runs parallel to it, with many suburban villas, and having a station on the Great Eastern Railway, and is a separate ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1845; it is 2 miles north from West Ham and 5½ from Whitechapel, on the road from Stratford, over the Forest, to Epping and Ongar; it is in the Eastern Metropolitan postal district. The church of St. John the Baptist is a handsome building, consisting of small chancel and a nave, with a light and graceful square tower at the western end, from the summit of which rise four spires with crocketed finials; there are 600 sittings. The register dates from the year 1838. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £304, in the gift of the Bishop of St. Albans, and held by the Rev. William James Bettison, M.A. of Corpus College, Cambridge. Holy Trinity church was built in 1878 at a cost of £6,600, exclusive of gifts, font and lectern: the style is Early Gothic: there are 800 sittings, all free. The living is a vicarage yearly value £150 in the gift of the Bishop of St. Albans, and held by the Rev. Henry Ferdinand Battiscombe, of King's College, London.

The Congregational church is a handsome building, in the Lombardo-Gothic style, erected in 1877-78, from designs by Mr. J. Lewis Banks, A.R.I.B.A. of Finsbury circus: the cost, including site, was between £8,000 and £9,000: the plan of the building approaches the shape of a Greek cross, with the view of keeping the congregation near to and in front of the preacher; there are sittings for

STRATFORD.

STRATFORD (OF STRATFORD LANGTHORNE), the ford of the street or Roman way from London to Colchester, a polling place for the Southern division of the county, is a suburb of London, and lies on the east side of the navigable river Lee and on the Great Eastern railway, whence the Colchester and the Cambridge, and the Blackwall and North Woolwich, and the Woodford and the Tilbury and Southend branch lines diverge: there are three stations, viz., Stratford Central station, Stratford Bridge, and Forest Gate. It is  $3\frac{1}{4}$  miles from Shoreditch, is a ward of the parish of West Ham, and in the union of West Ham, in the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court and Metropolitan Police, in the Bow county court district, rural deanery of Barking, archdeaconry of Essex and diocese of St. Albans, and Eastern Metropolitan postal district. It is united to Stratford-le-Bow, in Middlesex, by a bridge over the river Lee. Tramways are laid down from the Broadway to Aldgate.

Stratford is included in the Local Board District of West Ham.

St. John's is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1844 from the mother parish of West Ham; the church is a large and handsome edifice, in the centre of the town, where the main road from the east of London diverges towards Romford and Leytonstone: it is in the Early English style, and was built at a cost of £23,000; of this sum £18,000 was raised by subscription, and the remainder advanced on security of the rates; the church consists of chancel, nave, aisles and tower. The land was given by the late Lord Mornington, then Tynney Long Wellesley Pole, esq. of Wanstead, and T. Humphreys, esq. lords of the manor: it had been before this an unenclosed village green. The church was erected in 1834 as a chapel of ease to the parish church of West Ham; it became a parish church about 1859, and was constituted a vicarage in 1868. The register dates from the year 1895. The living is a vicarage, value £310, in the gift of the vicar of West Ham, and held by the Rev. William Jay Bolton, M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge. The area is 301 acres; the population in 1871 was 10,834.

Christ Church is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1852 from the mother parish of West Ham: the church, in High street, erected in 1851, is a handsome stone building in the Decorated style, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles, with tower and spire. The register dates from the year 1852. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300, in the gift of trustees, and held by the Rev. James Wray Carter. The area is 405 acres; the population in 1871 was 4,000.

STRATFORD NEW TOWN, formerly called HUDSON'S TOWN, is a part of Stratford, adjoining the Angel lane railway station.

St. Paul, Stratford New Town, was formed into an ecclesiastical parish from the mother parish of West Ham, in 1865. The church, situated in the Maryland road, is a plain brick building, with chancel, nave, aisles, apse, and a turret with 1 bell. There are sittings for 1,250 persons, half of which are free. The register dates from December 10th, 1864. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300, in the gift of five trustees, and held by the Rev. William Spencer. The area is 236 acres; the population in 1871 was 8,730.

The Congregationalists, Baptists, and Wesleyans have chapels here.

The Catholic church of St. Francis of Assisi was opened May 12, 1868: it is a rectangular building in the Italian style, 90 feet by 35, capable of holding 400 persons, with a small tower over the porch containing 1 bell; there is also a large school room for boys underneath; the cost was £6,000.

The Town hall, opened July 7th, 1869, is situated at the corner of West Ham lane and the Broadway, Stratford, and has a frontage of about 100 feet each way.

On the river Lee are flour mills, chemical and print works, artificial manure factories, soap and candle works, vesta and match manufactories and distilleries.

In 1135 an abbey for Cistercian monks was founded here, the abbot of which was a lord of Parliament, and of which the income at the Dissolution was £573 15s. 6d.: there are considerable remains of the building. George Edwards, the naturalist, was born here in 1692 and was also buried here.

The population of the Stratford Ward in the West Ham Local Board District in 1871 was 23,286.
